Capability Gaps — What They Do That We Don't (Yet)

Gap	Who Does It	Opportunity for HI	Effort
Installation Services	A Squared, Bond Street, Beyer Brown, Benjamin West	Clients want one point of contact through install. Biggest gap. Partner with a local install crew or hire.	Medium — subcontract initially
OS&E (Linens, Tableware, Amenities)	Bond Street, Miami Hotel Solutions, Beyer Brown	Increases per-project revenue 15–25% without finding new clients. Natural upsell.	Low — source and add to proposals
Logistics / Tracking Software	Beyer Brown (proprietary), Benjamin West	Real-time client portal showing order status. Builds trust, reduces "where's my stuff?" calls.	Medium — SaaS or custom build

PIP Analysis (Branded Hotels)	Blume Group, JSM, Beyer Brown	Steady, repeatable pipeline. Marriott/Hilton/IHG renovations are constant. Lower margin but consistent.	Low — leverage existing relationships
Content Marketing	Beyer Brown (guides, worksheets, blog)	Educational content builds trust before first call. Procurement guides, timeline templates, case studies.	Low — Iris can produce this

HI's Competitive Moat

What no competitor has:

Peter Higney has 25 years of operating luxury hospitality venues — 12 beach clubs, hotels, restaurants across 4 continents. He designed the Nikki Beach brand. Most FF&E competitors are designers or purchasing agents. None of them have run the venues their furniture goes into.

The result: HI designs for operational reality, not just aesthetics. We know what breaks, what guests actually touch, what looks great in a rendering but fails in 90°F salt air. That gap between design intent and operational durability is HI's core value proposition.
